Indiana Precision Grinding (IPG) Supports Growth Strategies with New Salesperson

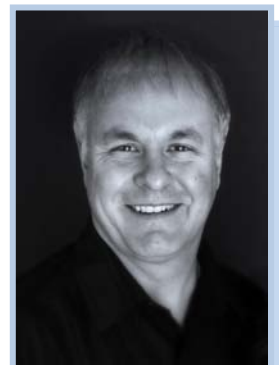

Indianapolis, IN, January 15, 2009:

Over the last several years IPG has been dedicated to adding new capabilities and new technologies as well as making significant operational improvements all with two things in mind...supporting our current customers and growing our business. In doing so we have re-invented ourselves as a Partner in Performance through Precision and it is changing the way we do business.

Having a dedicated salesperson on staff will allow IPG to support their customers at the highest level possible. IPG has always maintained a passionate commitment to customer service and this is just one more initiative aimed at setting the standard even higher.

We wanted someone that embraced our partnership-based culture that would work hands-on with our customers and their teams to find innovative ways to use IPG's precision solutions to address their most pressing strategic, operational and technical issues. We also wanted someone dedicated to pursuing new opportunities that are aligned with the sales strategies identified in our five year strategic growth plan.

Brian Ewen was hired by IPG in December 2008. Brian brings an impressive record of customer service and sales experience to IPG. He has worked for the past eight years in the auto industry with experience in everything from sales and sales management to president of his own company. His ability to develop relationships, think creatively to solve problems, and understand technical concepts and applications made him an ideal candidate for IPG's sales position. His enthusiasm and desire to work with people will allow IPG to support and partner with our customers in a way that is unparalleled in the industry.
